

How to Cite BNA Publications

BNA[®]
Essential Information
Expert Analysis

In nearly all legal writing, the authorities that support the author's assertions must be identified. Most statements in a brief, memorandum, or other legal writing require a citation to other sources that form the basis for the statement. Citations permit the reader to understand the nature of the source and locate it if desired. One major system of citation long institutionalized in courts, law schools, and law firms is provided by A Uniform System of Citation, commonly known as the Bluebook because it is bound in a blue cover. In certain circumstances it is necessary to depart from Bluebook style as many courts, law reviews, individual law firms, and lawyers prefer to adopt their own variations. As a general rule, however, Bluebook citation format remains the prevailing system of citation.

BNA publications are commonly cited in briefs, memorandums, law reviews, and court opinions. Even the U.S. Supreme Court has cited BNA publications. BNA publishes not only the full text of cases in a variety of areas but also valuable analysis of legal issues that serve as persuasive authority.

The following guide, prepared by BNA's reference librarians, offers Bluebook citations for the majority of BNA publications. As with all citation guides, users are encouraged to check with their court, firm, or school for any unique rules used in the institution. Good luck, and happy Bluebooking.
